

Buzzy® and Dr. Baxter get around ...

O: THE OPRAH MAGAZINE

100 Things that are (actually) getting better,
February 2010.

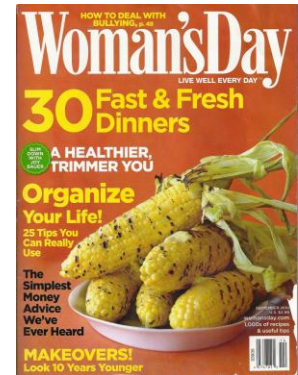

Number 83: Shots with Buzzy.

WOMAN'S DAY

4 Things You May Not Know About Vaccines, September 2010.

Number 4: Shots don't have to hurt . . .

you can use Buzzy.

CONCEIVE MAGAZINE

The Experts on Getting Pregnant

A bee that takes away the sting, July/August 2009

Reduce the discomfort of frequent shots with Buzzy.

Pain Center

Cruelest cut: Tiny injuries can bring the biggest pain, November 9, 2010

“Based [on Gate Control Theory], Baxter, the Atlanta doctor, developed . . . a new product called Buzzy. The vibrating cold pack is placed on a child’s arm before an injection, confusing the nerves and distracting the brain’s attention away from the poke. The primary idea is stop kids from fearing inoculations. Buzzy is now being used in about 100 hospitals, Baxter said, including the Mayo Clinic.”

Aol Small Business.

Aol Original: 27 Million and Counting: Amy Baxter, Buzzy, September 24, 2010

Meet Amy Baxter, founder of Buzzy, an Atlanta-based company that makes a device to dull the pain of shots, bee stings or other "boo-boos" for kids.

THE DOCTORS

Buzzy will be featured in the upcoming episode, 40 Ways To Flight The Flu.

www.buzzy4shots.com 877-805-BUZZ